Cook's Corner

Roasted Cod & Shrimp In Tomato Sauce

Are you looking to add more fish to your weekly menu rotation but struggle with finding easy ways to make fish? Here's a healthy recipe that is certain to become a favorite. At our house we like to serve this luscious dish over a bed of cooked orzo (or other cooked pasta), with lemon slices, Parmesan cheese and a good, toasty bread. But we've also enjoyed this as a "soup". In addition to the cod and shrimp, you could also add some bay scallops, or fresh mussels. The roasted tomato sauce is also a great technique for making a savory sauce, even without the seafood, for your favorite pasta. I really hope you enjoy this one, it's a keeper. Bon appetit!

1 (28 oz) can of whole, peeled tomatoes, crushed by hand

1 onion, sliced

2 Tbsp minced garlic

½ cup of good red wine

¼ cup olive oil

3 Tbsp of capers, or a palmful of pitted black olives

½ tsp crushed red pepper

1 tsp dried basil

1 tsp dried oregano

2 Tbsp balsamic vinegar

1 Tbsp sugar

Salt & pepper, fresh ground

6 to 12 oz cod fillets

½ to 1 lb raw shrimp, thawed & peeled

Parsley for serving

Cooked orzo or other pasta (optional)

Heat oven to 425. In an oven proof pot, such as a Dutch Oven, combine tomatoes (crush them with your hands), onions, wine, olive oil, crushed red pepper, basil, oregano, balsamic vinegar, sugar, and the capers or olives, season with salt & pepper. Transfer the pot to the oven and roast the sauce until it thickens, for about 40 to 45 minutes.

Meanwhile, pat the cod fillets dry with paper towel, then season with salt & pepper. Thaw the shrimp and peel. Add the cod and the shrimp to the roasted tomato sauce, nestle the seafood down into the sauce so it's covered. Return the pot to the oven and continue cooking for another 15 minutes or until the cod and shrimp are done. Before serving top with fresh chopped parsley - MP Christakos
